Dear Mr. Mills:

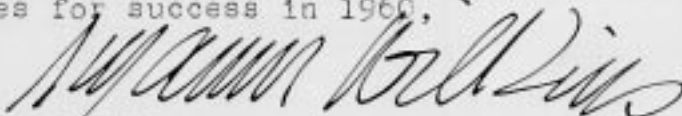

For some time I have intended writing to your organisation to ask some questions about Urantia and to learn all I can, if you're in a position and willing to tell, of my late husband's connexion with your work.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, to whom I was married for 29 years, was a most unusual and devout man. As far as his religious feelings and views were concerned he was slightly mysterious, as he did not wear his heart on his sleeve, as it were.

I was well aware of his interest in Urantia, of course, as we often discussed it, and I have read the book at regular intervals with absorbed interest, especially the selections he had pointed out to me. I have many of his personal notes and papers on Urantia, which are of great interest, and possibly would be of great value. Also, I am happy to have a personal recording in his own voice of his thoughts on many aspects of Urantia.

He told many others of Urantia, including Lowell Thomas, a very old friend of ours, who is writing a book on Sir Hubert. To add to the interest in this book, Lowell Thomas has asked me if I thought it might be possible to secure any information from the Urantia Brotherhood that they would be willing to have used or reproduced or incorporated in this book, to show this side of Sir Hubert's life and at the same time add to the public interest in Urantia. So, in addition to writing for my own purposes, I am expressing Lowell Thomas's interest in the matter as well. There were many people in the Government Services, of course, who had more than a passing acquaintance with Urantia. I should therefore appreciate anything you feel free to tell me, and suggest that to avoid any breach of your principles you tell me what is for my own personal information and what may be divulged, and I give my solemn promise no confidence will be abused. Obviously, the very source of the information contained in Urantia is of great and mysterious interest.

With all good wishes for success in 1960,

Suzanne Wilkins
