Dear Sir Hubert:

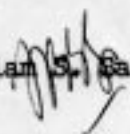

Your letter of November eighth caught me out of town on a little trip. I see that Leone has already written you about the notebooks. Hope that you have recovered them safely by now.

The "Draft Sample" of an introductory letter for the book is, I believe, quite good. It gives the prospective reader something to get going on and, once he is into the book, nature and curiosity will rather compel him to carry on -- unless he has a closed mind.

Do keep us posted concerning your personal adventure in the distribution of the book. As Leone has told you, we have already received a few "blessings" and a few "brickbats."

Kindest personal regards.

Cordially and sincerely,

William S. Sadler, Jr.
